

Akagera National Park

The Akagera National Park lies in the east, where the countryside gives way to savannah, with clusters of acacia mingled with open grassland. The scenery is dominated by a labyrinth of swamps and lakes that follow the meandering course of the Akagera river, believed to be the most remote source of the river Nile.

Giraffe and Zebra stalk the savannah and antelope abound.

As one makes their way through the swamps and savanna, giraffes and zebra roam freely. In excess of a dozen species of antelope, which include the handsome Chestnut Coated Impala, the diminutive Oribi, the ungainly Tsessebe, and shy Bushbuck can be seen. Among these is also the statuesque Cape Eland, the world's largest antelope. Elephant and buffalo emerge from the savannah in the evening to drink from the lake edges. Here one might come across a leopard, a warthog, a spotted hyena and occasionally, a stray lion.

Pods of hippo litter the many waterways and crocodiles - jaws agape - intent on finding their next meal, bask in the sun on the sand banks.

The park boasts of a unique 'spring-like climate' which make safaris to this area exceptionally pleasant.
